

Here's what you need to know about Alzheimer's.

Alzheimer's is not normal aging; it's a progressive, fatal disease. There is no cure. And today it is the seventh-leading cause of death in the United States.

There are currently more than 5 million Americans living with Alzheimer's – including as many as 500,000 individuals under age 65. By 2050 there could be as many as 16 million with the disease.

With no effective prevention or treatment methods, Alzheimer's disease has the power to bankrupt families, communities and our health care system.

And here's what you can do...

alzheimer's  association[®]

the compassion to care, the leadership to conquer

Turn to the Alzheimer's Association, the leading voluntary health organization in Alzheimer care, support and research.

Learn about Alzheimer's disease – its warning signs, who's at risk and what treatments are available.

Connect with your local chapter by participating in a support group, getting information about care options or attending one of our educational workshops.

Advocate for those affected by Alzheimer's, and urge legislators to increase funding for research, care and support.

Volunteer with 35,000 others who work with us to provide essential services across the country.

Participate in Memory Walk[®], our signature event to raise funds and awareness in more than 600 communities annually.

Donate to help fund vital research and care programs.

We're here to help.

Our mission is to eliminate Alzheimer's through the advancement of research; to provide and enhance care and support for all affected; and to reduce the risk of dementia through the promotion of brain health.

Our vision is a world without Alzheimer's.
