Dementia Diagnosis in Minority Populations Study
Are you a caregiver for a family member with dementia and a minority?

We want to understand dementia diagnosis experiences and benefits or harms of diagnosis from the caregiver and patient point of view.

To join the research study, you must be a caregiver for a family member with dementia who is age 60 years or older. You must be age 18 years or older and of African American, Hispanic or Asian race.

This research study involves completing a one-on-one interview at your home or at Johns Hopkins Bayview Medical Center. Your family member will also be invited to participate if they are able to. You will be asked questions about the experience of your family member getting diagnosed with dementia. You will also complete a short survey. The interview will last for about 1.5 hours.

You will receive a $40 gift card for your participation.

If you are interested in learning more about the study, contact 410-550-6829.
Dr. Halima Amjad, Principal Investigator
Study number 00188310